RADIOLOGY REPORT

DATE OF SERVICE: 09/25/03.

CLINICAL DATA
Swollen knee in a patient with history of anterior cruciate ligament repair.

MRI OF THE RIGHT KNEE

COMPARISON
None.

TECHNIQUE
Scanner: General Electric 1.0T Signa MR imaging system.
Sequences: Four sequences consisting of T1 weighted and T2 weighted sagittal images, T1 weighted oblique coronal images for anterior cruciate ligament, and T1 weighted fat-suppressed axial and coronal images.

FINDINGS
There has been anterior cruciate ligament reconstruction, with femoral and tibial compression screws in place. The reconstructed ligament demonstrates no evidence of recurrent tear. Posterior cruciate ligament is intact. The medial meniscus is intact. The ferromagnetic artifacts from the compression screws partially degrade the image quality of the lateral meniscus. Its posterior horn has a foreshortened appearance and a small tear at its inner margin. In addition, there is probable bucket-handle tear of the posterior horn as well. The patellar cartilage surface is normal. Minimal chondromalacia of the medial knee compartment and moderate chondromalacia of the lateral compartment is present with rather poor visualization. There is a stage II osteochondritis desiccans (8 mm) involving the lateral femoral condyle. Collateral ligaments and patellar retinacula are intact. Patellar and quadriceps tendons are normal. Ganglion cyst or abnormal bursal distension is not seen.

IMPRESSION
1. Status post anterior cruciate ligament reconstruction without evidence of tear.
